CIRCULAR SAWS!

Made Without Hammering.

The "SIMONDS" saws are straightened by means of heat and pressure, and without hammering, and are warranted superior to hammered saws for the following reasons.
The success of the process requiring a uniform heat, insures a perfectly uniform temper, and they file and set in a more satisfactory manner.
Being free from uneven strain or buckle, they stand up to their work better.
As the steel is left in its natural condition by this process, the saws retain their original shape, or position, as they are reduced in size, thus avoiding the necessity and expense of re-hammering.
Being made of a higher quality of steel than it is practical to use by the old method, they hold an edge longer.
Large circular mill saws can be run at any reasonable speed with equally good results,—saws 56 inches in diameter having been tested from 400 to 1250 turns a minute with perfect satisfaction,—while hammered saws must be hammered differently for different speeds.
The "SIMONDS" saws received at the Centennial, a Medal, Diploma, and the following report of the Board of Judges:
"Circular Saws of beautiful finish and form, and originality in the method of manufacture."
A trial of the "Simonds" SAWS will satisfy any mill man that he cannot afford to use hammered saws.

CRONIN'S TESTIMONY—A HEAVY DOSE FOR THE DEMOCRATS—THE FRAUD ORGANIZED IN NEW YORK.

[Special Dispatch to the New York Times.]

WASHINGTON Jan 3.—The action of Senator Morton and his committee in presenting a telegraph operator to the Senate for contumacy in refusing to answer questions concerning dispatches is not taken because Senator Morton subscribes to the doctrine that telegraphic dispatches are the proper spoils of Congressional committees. The Senator without personally desiring to press a contest with the telegraph company thinks it the dispatches are to be called for this is a proper occasion. The dispatches, if produced will undoubtedly show the transfer of $8 000 to Oregon from New York near the day of the meeting of the Electoral College. There is testimony relating to this subject and the use of the money. The testimony of Cronin under cross-examination has pretty thoroughly disgusted those Democrats who were trying to support his fraud. It appears that of the $3 000 which he received all but about $200 was from the fund sent from New York. The money was his bribe for while he claims it for expenses he will not spend much if any above $600 in bringing the vote here and returning and the remainder is clear profit. He was entrapped into the confession evidently supposing it had become known and he wanted to put as good a face as possible on the transaction. The testimony taken altogether leaves no room for doubt that the Oregon fraud was organized and perfected by New York money. The House will not deal with its contumacious witnesses till next Friday, and it looks as though the attempt to secure telegraph dispatches would be delayed and finally suffered to die out without action.

[Dispatch to the Associated Press.]

The Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections to-day continued taking testimony in relation to the Oregon case. Mr E. A. Cronin of Portland, Oregon, the man who had received the highest number of votes on the Democratic Electoral ticket and to whom Gov Grover issued the certificate of election was the first witness called. Senator Kernan conducting the direct examination. Mr Cronin testified that he is a lawyer and has lived in Oregon since April 1861. After giving a brief history of the late election in Oregon Mr Cronin stated that he attended the meeting of the Electoral College, in answer to a knock he opened the door of the room in which the Electoral College met and he received an envelope containing the certificates of the Electors from the hand of Secretary of State Chadwick. He put the envelope in his pocket because he was of the impression that an attempt might be made to take it from him. He stated that after leaving the table at which the Republican Electors sat he observed their proceedings, but could not say what they actually did. He does not think they took a ballot for President and Vice President. In answer to Mr Morton the witness stated that Gov Grover had not informed him that his [Cronin's] name was on the Electoral certificate, or that it was to be put on. On the morning of the day on which the Electoral College met, the witness went to the Governor's room. He saw the Governor's private Secretary, who was then engaged in making out certificates for Electors. The witness looked over the shoulder of the Secretary and saw his name on the certificate. Upon hearing a knock at the door of the room in which the College met, he surmised who and what was there, but had no previous arrangement with any person or persons whereby the certificate should be handed to him. Mr Chadwick did not call the witnesses' name when he handed in the envelope containing the certificate. Messrs Laswell and Klippel were in the room where the College met but not by previous arrangement. The witness understood they would be there but did not tell them to come, he appointed Messrs Miller and Parker Electors, he had a previous understanding with them that they should be outside ready to answer when called and they did not come into the room until he had read the certificate to and left the Republican Electors, he showed the certificates of Electors to Messrs Miller and Parker, but don't know whether they read them or not. Witness told the Republican Electors that he took their silence as a refusal to act with him, they made him no answer which he heard. Mr Parker was made Secretary of the college and a ballot was taken, witness writing the ballots. Messrs Parker and Miller are Democrats, and cast their votes for Hayes and Wheeler. The witness never met Mr Miller until the day of the meeting of the Electoral College, on the evening previous to the meeting of the college, Mr Klippel informed the witness that Messrs Miller and Parker would act with him if he needed them, the witness read the certificate through in the presence of the Republican Electors, Mr Cartwright could have read it also as he stood only one pace from the witness at that time, witness said he did not feel bound to put the certificates on the table when the majority of the college so ordered, the question of right did not enter into that as much as the question of expediency, he had never advised with any lawyer in relation to his right to cast an Electoral vote; he had never had any conversation with Senator Kelley in regard to the course which he [Mr. Cronin] should pursue in the Electoral College, it was generally conceded by Republicans and Democrats, on the day previous to the meeting of the Electoral College that witness was to receive a certificate of election as an Elector, all that Governor Grover had said was that this was an important question, and he wanted to hear all that could be said on both sides, witness was at the table with Messrs. Parker and Miller in the room where the college met between 10 and 15 minutes; upon leaving there he went to the office of the State Treasurer, then into one of the rooms of the Executive office to prepare the Electoral returns, neither Gov. Grover or Secretary of State Chadwick were present; the returns were signed and sealed between 3 and 4 o'clock in the evening; witness was elected Messenger to bring the vote to Washington before he left the room in which the college met; no arrangement was made there to pay the expenses of the trip; in the evening the witness asked to be allowed to resign as Messenger, as he could not afford to make the trip, he had spent $1,500 during the campaign for election purposes, no promise has ever been made that the money thus spent shall be refunded, is not a rich man, spent the money with no idea of getting it back. he had a law practice worth from $5,000 to $6,000 a year, when witness stated that he could not afford to come to Washington there were several prominent Democrats present, they thought he ought to come and said he would probably be subpoenaed to come, witness was asked what his expenses would be, and some of the gentlemen present expressed their willingness to help pay them, he estimates his expenses at $3,000, those present thought it too much, and he refused to come for less, he had a case to try in the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon, which interfered with his coming, he advised with his client in relation to his coming, and his client said, "You may as well go, for unless Tilden is elected the country is gone, and then the case won't amount to anything," the matter of witness expenses was fixed up at Portland, he was not sure of the money to pay his expenses until the day before he started for Washington, the actual expense of making the trip from Portland to Washington is about $200. Mr Bellinger, Chairman of the Democratic Committee informed witness the day before he started for Washington that he (Bellinger) had $2 800 and the additional $200 to make the $3 000 required was raised, a note signed by Bellinger and witness was deposited at the banking house of Ladd & Tilton. Tilton is a New-Yorker, and his politics are unknown to witness, he does not know where the $2,800 came from which he received, but supposes it was raised among the Democrats of Oregon, witness knows a man named Patrick, met him in the office of Judge Strong at Portland, Mr Patrick lives at Omaha, Mr Bellinger met witness on the street at Portland about 10 days previous to the meeting of the Electoral College, and informed him that a gentleman wished to see him (Cronin) at the office of Judge Strong. Witness refused to go and told Mr Bellinger that whatever was done in this Electoral muddle must be done by others than himself, witness afterward went to Strong's office and there met Mr Patrick who said that he had heard that witness had said that if a certificate as Elector was issued to him he would not act but witness informed Mr Patrick that he had changed his mind and Mr Patrick said to witness, If Tilden is President he will give you anything you want, witness informed Mr Patrick that if he (Patrick) was acquainted with Mr Tilden he might tell him that he had nothing to give which he (Cronin) wanted, witness was a little angry at Mr Patrick for talking in such a manner, Mr Patrick informed witness that he supposed the reason he (Patrick) had been sent to Oregon was, that he was the furtherest one West, witness did not know what Mr Patrick meant by his remark. he had heard that Patrick was Superintendent of a mine in Colorado, Patrick said nothing about money in his interview with witness, witness never saw Patrick except on the one occasion above mentioned and had no conversation with Bellinger about Patrick, witness had received no message from the East in relation to the Electoral muddle before seeing Patrick, witness knows of a man named Dimon in New York, thinks he is a banker. after the Electoral College had met and adjourned witness saw a despatch signed Bristow which said, It is important that the returns of Oregon should be properly made up and sent to their destination, Ladd & Tilton have a banking house at Portland, Ladd & Bush have one at Salem. A. E. & C. F. Tilton of No 115 Liberty street New York are correspondents of the Oregon banking houses above mentioned, witness received drafts for the money for his expenses between 4 and 5 o'clock P. M. on the 8th of December in Ladd & Tilton's bank from the manager, Mr Quackenbush, there were three drafts, one on New York and two on California bank the twenty-eight hundred dollars was not tendered him in cash. Dimon's name is mentioned in the draft on New York which is for $2 100, witness did say at first that he would not act as an Elector if a certificate was given him but changed his mind after looking up the law and after hearing of the actions of the South Carolina, Florida, and Louisiana Returning Boards. In answer to Mr Kernan witness stated that he canvassed the State with Mr Watts and they closed the canvass together at Portland, Watts being a Post master had been mentioned by both himself and witness in a jocose way at public meetings, witness knew Watts was ineligible as an Elector before the election but said nothing about it.

William F. Turner Manager of the Western Union Telegraph Office at Jacksonville Oregon was the next witness and in answer to questions from Senator Morton states that he saw a man whom he supposed was Mr Patrick pass through Jacksonville on the stage on the 20th of November, Mr Klippel lives at Jacksonville but witness did not know of Patrick and Klippel's meeting at Jacksonville.

Senator Morton then asked. Do you know of any despatches in relation to Mr Patrick having passed over your wire? A. I cannot divulge anything passing on the wire.

Q.—What do you know about $8 000 having been transmitted from New York to Oregon by telegraph? A.—I know of nothing that I can divulge.

Q.—Did a despatch in regard to Dimon pass over your wire? A. I decline to answer.

Q.—Did not Dimon telegraph to Ladd & Tilton of Portland to draw $8 000 on him between Nov 25 and the first Wednesday in December? A.—I decline to answer.

Q.—I ask if you know anything in regard to another sum of $1 700 telegraphed previously to the $8 000 and from A. E. & C. E. Tilton of New York, to this same firm at Portland? A.—I decline to answer.

The committee then adjourned.

THE OREGON FRAUD.

The Senate investigation is developing evidence that promises to fully establish the fact that the Cronin bogus Elector business was the result of a criminal conspiracy directed from Tilden's headquarters in New York. Under the searching cross-examination by Senator Morton, the fellow, Cronin, let out enough of the truth to throw the whole Democratic camp into panic, and his admissions have opened the trail to even more important evidence. He testified that he had at first asserted that he would not act as an Elector if Watts should be declared ineligible, but that he had been persuaded subsequently to change his mind. He admitted that an agent of Tilden's from New York had assured him that if he would take the certificate and vote for Tilden he could have any office in Tilden's gift, but he says he was offended by this conversation. He concluded, however, to take the job, and went through with it as has been reported. On being pressed he further admitted that he had received $3,000 "to pay his expenses as Messenger to Washington," and this payment has led to interesting developments. As his actual expenses are only about $400, the $3,000 is transparently a bonus, and the committee are actively connecting the links to show how and by whom this sum and a great deal more was sent to Oregon from the Tilden barrel in New York.

Cronin testified that he received his money in drafts at Ladd & Tilton's bank. The telegraph manager at Jacksonville was examined as to the transfer of money by telegraph from New York to the above banking-house, but declined to answer questions explicitly naming the senders and the amounts of transfer drafts. He would not deny but simply declined to answer. The case was brought before the Senate on Friday, and after a long debate a resolution that the telegraph manager should be required to answer questions was sustained 33 to 3. The action in this case was urged on the ground that it was no drag-net demand for a general rummaging of private despatches, but a requisition for answers to specific questions for which basis had been regularly made according to the rules of evidence. We are entirely opposed to any straining of Congressional authority to interfere with the privacy of the telegraph, and hope that the Senate in this case will keep clearly within the well-established rules of procedure. Indeed, it hardly seems necessary to compel the testimony of the telegraph agent, except as corroboration, as the principals to the transaction are known with tolerable accuracy and can be made to state the facts.

On Friday Mr. A. F. R. Martin, of the firm of Martin & Runyon, stock-brokers of 41 Wall street, New York, was examined concerning a check drawn by them Dec. 6. for $8,000 payable to the Salem branch of the Oregon banking-house from which Cronin got his funds. Mr. Martin said he only knew that such a check had been drawn by seeing the stub in the check-book, and Senator Kernan at once interposed against any further questioning, as the witness' statements would only be "hearsay evidence." Senator Mitchell, however, elicited from the witness the facts that he was joined at Newark by a gentleman introducing himself as Col. Burton C. Harrison, formerly private Secretary to Jeff. Davis and more lately to Mayor Wickham of New York, who had been previously introduced to him as one who would "give him advice and help him along with his business." They came on together and the only advice given was that witness "should testify only to what he knew, in other words give no hearsay evidence." The witness provoked a laugh by remarking, with evident reference to Kernan's prior protest, that the latter part of the advice was hardly needed. Harrison went into close consultation with the Democratic Senators immediately on his arrival. Runyon, the partner who should know about the check, has been subpoenaed and other parties in New York and Oregon who have been traced to connection with the affair will be put on the stand. The evidence gathered by the committee indicates that about $30,000 were used by the Democrats in transactions connected with organizing "Cronin's Electoral College," and it is intended to show conclusively that the purchase money of that fraud was furnished from the New York headquarters. The Democrats who were boasting of the Oregon trick only a few weeks ago, would now gladly have Cronin and Grover at the bottom of the sea, and the revelations of this criminal conspiracy to steal an Electoral vote through the boldest bribery and corruption promise to give the public a very definite idea of the political methods of Samuel J. Tilden.

ANOTHER TECHNICALITY.

By a mistake in names several papers have stated that the papers containing the Wisconsin vote were irregular. The case referred to is that of Arkansas, the Electoral certificate of which was tendered to the President of the Senate without the required indorsement of the Electors on the package, while the messenger had no certificate of his appointment or authority. Mr. Ferry at first refused to receive the papers, but subsequently, on the representation of Congressmen who vouched for the identity of the messenger, he consented to receive it and leave the question of its irregularity for future adjudication. Several days afterward the same messenger again made his appearance, and asked that he might be allowed to withdraw the package previously filed, and to substitute another one which, he said, met all the requirements of the statute. This request was, of course, refused, and the irregular certificate must stand until action can be taken by the constitutional authorities to determine its validity. The question is, how did the messenger get the second sealed package, and if the Electors failed, on the day prescribed by existing law, to draw up the certificate in proper form as to their action, had they any legal right to meet on a subsequent day and rectify their mistake at the telegraphic request of Democratic leaders in Washington?

If Congress can meddle and the House can throw States out by raising objections, it can always throw the election into itself. Can any student of the Constitution suppose its makers prepared the electoral scheme and disjointed it in a way so preposterous?—Cincinnati Commercial.

Gov. Tilden was confronted with a startling demonstration of public opinion the other day. As he walked by an admiring policeman, the latter nudged a neighboring small boy and remarked with fervor, "There's yer President!" Small boy looked at the Governor for a moment and inquired, "Is that Hayes!"

THE PLAIN WAY.

[From the N. Y. Times.]

In our columns this morning, Mr. E. W. Stoughton discusses at length and with great clearness and force, the question of counting and declaring the Electoral votes. His letter will be found not only interesting as bearing on the law of this important question—as to which Mr. Stoughton is properly accepted as a high authority—but also as exposing with characteristic acumen and vigor the hopeless absurdity of the various Democratic theories. In his general conclusions, Mr. Stoughton agrees with the position early taken by us that, in the absence of any specific legislation, there is ample power lodged by the Constitution in the President of the Senate to determine all the questions which have arisen regarding the Electoral votes. This is a fact which cannot be too much insisted upon. It has suited the purposes of the Democrats to conceal it, and to press upon the public mind the notion that the President of the Senate has only powers which are merely ministerial, or rather mechanical. They have persistently represented the opposite view as an invention of the day, and have affected to sneer it out of the way as not worthy of consideration.

But, so far from being a recent invention, or in any way an afterthought, the Republican doctrine is the plain teaching of the Constitution, sanctioned by the highest commentator's authority, and strengthened by many cases of early and consistent application in practice. At the time when the Constitution was yet new, when many of its framers sat in Congress, and when the public mind was keenly alive to any misinterpretation of its intention, especially in the direction of the assumption of power by single officers, it was not questioned that the counting of the Electoral vote was a duty of the President of the Senate. On the contrary, on the first occasion when that duty had to be performed, the Senate, being as yet without a President, elected one pro tempore for the express purpose of attending to it. And this clear and decisive instance is rendered more conclusive by the subsequent course of events, which was wholly in harmony with it.

The constitutional doctrine that the President of the Senate must, in the language of Kent, "count the votes and determine the result," involves the essential duty and power of that officer to determine which are votes, and what result they produce. This is the only interpretation of the law warranted by its language and by precedent, and, what is of controlling importance, it is the only one which will work. It is a principle as old as law itself that every legal provision must be so construed, if possible, as to make it effective. This is so clearly necessary that law would be useless without it. If courts and other bodies charged with finding the meaning of laws were turned loose to pick flaws in the statute-book, and to give heed to no law which was not absolutely incapable of dubious interpretation, we should have chaos come again. It has become a proverbial saying that no act of Parliament was ever passed, through which a coach and four could not be driven. If, then, no law were to be obeyed until captious objectors all ceased to find fault with its meaning, and all agreed upon its interpretation, the farce which Government would become might as well be at once swept off the stage.

Mr. Stoughton makes an extremely forcible explanation of the absolute impossibility of relying on any other interpretation of the Constitution and the laws, as they are, than that which we have consistently advocated, namely, that the President of the Senate, guided by such information as he can command, shall decide what votes are to be counted by him; that he shall then count them, as his predecessors did in Washington's day, and that the result arrived at shall be final. This is a method plainly derived from the Constitution, and it will work. All others rest on technical, narrow, or whimsical interpretations, and will not work. Read the Constitution as Mr. Stoughton presents it, with the Democratic view of the power of Congress incorporated, and see whether it can be for one moment supposed that the framers of that instrument ever intended to have such nonsense made of it.

The Constitution never divided power between the House and the Senate for the purpose of defeating the objects for which power is given. That would have been mere folly, such as Mexicans might have indulged in, caught by the sound of phrases, but such as the founders, used to thinking things out, and setting out to give themselves a practical government, never could have conceived. The Constitution requires that both Houses and the President shall assent to an act of Legislation before it becomes a law; but it does not declare that certain things shall be done, and then that if either House chooses, they shall not be done. But that is precisely what the Democrats wish us to believe of the Constitution. It is declared that the "votes shall be counted." The Democrats say that unless the House likes the way in which they are being counted, they shall not be counted. To suppose that the framers of the Constitution intended to run the country down any such blind alley of legal interpretation, is to suppose that they had no more sense than Springer and no more patriotism than Hewitt.

Mr. Stoughton inclines to the opinion that Congress may, by legislation, settle the questions which are in doubt concerning the Electoral votes, though he is by no means emphatic in his statement in this direction. This view is not untenable and has been widely accepted, both in Congress and out of it. But it has been stoutly opposed by some of the ablest and most pronounced Democratic lawyers in the Senate. In the absence of such legislation, however, the question is whether the election of President and Vice President, already made by the Electoral Colleges, shall be declared by the method declared by the Constitution and used at the foundation of the Government, or whether, to suit the ambitious purposes of Mr. Tilden, the country shall be plunged into anarchy.

Gov. Robinson's high-toned remarks on the immorality of betting on elections must have been profoundly interesting to Mr. Dorsheimer, who listened to the reading of the message with $1,000 in his pocket, which he won through Mr. Tilden's success in that State.—Tribune.

SENATOR BLAINE'S NOMINATION.

WHAT OUR REPUBLICAN EXCHANGES SAY OF IT.

[From the Boston Journal.

The Republican members of the Maine Legislature, by the emphatic manner in which they nominated Hon. James G. Blaine as the Republican candidate for United States Senator, only faithfully represented the sentiments and desires of more than nineteen-twentieths of the Republican votes of that State. To have made another selection would have been to have utterly disregarded the wishes of the party the members of the Legislature represent. To have made it less emphatic would have failed to represent the admiration which the rank and file of the Republican party of Maine have for Mr. Blaine. A resident of Kennebec, the Republicans of the whole State, representing every interest and all stations of life, from the hardy pioneer in Aroostook to the merchant and banker in the city, from the lumberman in the remote forests to the shipbuilder on the coast, claim Mr. Blaine as the representative of the whole party in Maine. He stands to-day the most prominently recognized leader that any party in that State ever had. The enthusiasm with which the Whigs of Kentucky rallied about Henry Clay, or the admiration which the followers of Andrew Jackson were wont to express for him, were not more intense and general than the enthusiasm and admiration of the Republicans of Maine for their conspicuous leader. In behalf of the Republicans of Maine, their Representatives in the Legislature make answer to those journals and political and personal foes who have devoted themselves with remarkable energy, but with ill-concealed malice, to the purpose of destroying the character of Mr. Blaine. The applause of the caucus at Augusta, Thursday evening, is but the echo of the verdict which Republican meetings in every town in the State would render. Nor is Mr. Blaine's nomination the result of organization. During the canvass and the nomination of candidates for the Legislature no effort was made to secure men favorable to Mr. Blaine. No effort was made to pledge candidates to his support.

After the Cincinnati Convention the nomination of Mr. Blaine was made by a large majority of the Republicans of the State without holding conventions. The State Convention last June unanimously and enthusiastically declared that he was its choice for United States Senator.

Mr. Blaine enters upon his career in the Senate with an indorsement of his State such as few men ever had. He is not the nominee of a clique or the successful competitor in a sharp and heated contest, but the representative of a great and united party.

[From the Boston Traveller.]

The unanimous nomination by the Republicans of the Maine Legislature of Senator Blaine for the new term in the United States Senate, beginning on the 4th of March ensuing, is an event of a good deal of significance. His name was hailed with great enthusiasm, and the speeches made were the heartiest tributes of the love and confidence of an honest and courageous people for an able and faithful public servant. It should not stand as a rule that republics are ungrateful, when the evidence is so plain that the more the people know of a true and earnest man the more they love him. In victory and in defeat, through a storm of the most outrageous vilification and abuse, against the opposition of all the vilest newspapers and the most disloyal and disgraceful elements of politics and society, the people of Maine have stood by Mr. Blaine because he has stood by the cause of humanity. There are few men in this country who so thoroughly represent the spirit of Republicanism—of freedom, and equal rights and progress—as he does, and none who have done more able service in their behalf. We congratulate the people of Maine upon the steadfastness they manifest in presenting true men to maintain the principles of right and justice. Their example should inspire the Republicans everywhere to more zealous efforts for the promotion of their principles unimpaired by the vagaries of unsteady politicians, for therein lies party success no less than the welfare of the Republic. Men of stern convictions are wanted now, and not men whose principles depend upon fair weather.

[From the Boston Advertiser.]

The nomination of Mr. Blaine for the Senate, by the Republicans of the Maine Legislature, was made with complete unanimity and with extraordinary enthusiasm. The compliment is one of which any public man might be proud, and it will be especially pleasing to Mr. Blaine and to his numerous friends in all parts of the country as a striking proof of the esteem in which he is held at home. Mr. Blaine has filled a large place in our recent political history, and his capacity for usefulness in the future is great. After the 4th of March the Senate will be quite closely divided in political sentiment, and it would be strange if this circumstance did not make the floor of the chamber a much more exciting field of debate than it has been in the past. Mr. Blaine's readiness in debate, his thorough acquaintance with all departments of public affairs, and his great parliamentary skill, will make him a prominent member of the Senate at once; and both he and his constituents are to be congratulated upon the result of Thursday evening's caucus.

What a festive body the Port Hudson conclave of the "Two-Ninety-Eight" Society must be! A witness in the Louisiana investigation testifies that it was a social order, but the society had not done much of late. There was "not so much need of sociability since the election." The "sociability" that prevailed before the election seems to have welcomed a good many poor fellows "with bloody hands to hospitable graves."

COMMODORE VANDERBILT

The Last Sad Rites.

NEW YORK, Jan 7. The funeral of Commodore Vanderbilt took place from his late residence here to-day. The weather was extremely inclement; notwithstanding which a large number of persons called at the house prior to the removal of the remains to the Church of Strangers, where the funeral services were held. The remains, which were encased in a metallic casket, were laid in the large hall and viewed by friends and visitors and a deputation of 250 attaches of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad.

The floral offerings were of the most simple character and every attempt at display was studiously avoided. A large crowd witnessed the removal of the remains from the house to the Church of Strangers, which were carried by six men, during which 150 men from the Mercer street police station kept the place clear During the morning a large number of prominent men and railroad officials called

The procession from the house to the church was on foot and headed by Rev. Drs. Deems and Hutton, Drs. Lindly and Elliott, together with Drs. Flint and Van Buren, and Messrs. Wardell and Nurse. The casket was followed by W. H. Vanderbilt and Mrs. C. Vanderbilt, Mr. J. C. Vanderbilt and Mrs. W. H. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Cross and a large number of the relations of the deceased.

The Church of Strangers was heavily draped with black cloth. The admission was by tickets and every seat was occupied, the pews in the centre being reserved for the family and near friends. The casket was borne by twelve men preceded by Rev Dr Deems reciting the Episcopal burial service. It was placed on the catafalque outside the chancel, the only flowers on it being one small cross of tuberoses. The Commodore's pew [illegible] draped in mourning and remained unoccupied. The organ played a dirge as the procession moved up the aisle. After the service was read the hymns "Sweet hour of prayer," and "There is rest for the weary," were sung by the choir. These were two of the Commodore's favorite hymns. After the address of Dr Deems the remains were conveyed down Broadway to the White Hall Ferry followed by an immense throng of friends and several hundred carriages.

An immense crowd was collected around the church when the funeral set out shortly after 12 o'clock There were over one hundred carriages hired for the friends and employes of the deceased, in addition to which numerous private carriages and sleighs joined the cortege as it moved slowly down Broadway to Staten Island Ferry At two o'clock the carriages were landed at Vanderbilt Landing, the procession rejoined and set out for the old Moravian church at New Drop Cemetery which recently has been enlarged through the liberality of Vanderbilt. The church was unable to contain a tithe of those who came in carriages and crowds of Staten Islanders who had assembled there There were no emblems of mourning in the church, on the contrary it still wore its Christmas decorations The coffin having been borne up the aisle, prayer was delivered by the pastor, Rev W H. Vogeler, after which Dr Deems read the conclusion of the Episcopal burial service The coffin lid was then removed and all permitted to take a last look at the face of the dead Commodore The remains were then carried to the Vanderbilt vault adjoining The coffin was enclosed in a strong oaken chest and lowered to the place prepared for it after which the carriages returned The monument is about 30 feet high, of granite and marble with a statue of Grief in front and the single inscription, "Vanbilt"

THE BENNETT-MAY QUARREL

What the Sunday World Says.

NEW YORK, Jan 7 The World of Sunday says the hostile meeting between Bennett and May will probably take place today. Mr May and his cousin from Baltimore, who left New York Friday night, purchased tickets for Montreal But it is probable for some point this side of that city but on the other side of the border had been already selected and that Bennett was already waiting there, having taken a train by the Northern railroad from Boston This point in all probability is in the neighborhood of Stanstead and just over the Vermont line Despatches from Montreal make it certain that the parties did not go there The report that Mr Bennett had secured the services of Gen Richard Taylor as second, proves to be unfounded Gen Taylor is confined to his room in Washington by a severe indisposition

It is possible that Mr John Heckster will act in that capacity as he could not be found in the city last night Both Bennett and May have certainly left the city Said an intimate friend of the two gentlemen last night, "There is little or no doubt that they will fight They are neither of them men that will shirk the issue of a duel, for both are brave Bennett will behave as well as any man ever did There is no white feather in his cap, and he is a first rate shot. May is also an expert with the pistol and that will undoubtedly be the weapon chosen " It is said that this latter point was agreed upon before May left the city Neither ex-City Judge Gunning S Bedford nor Recorder Hackett could be found last night at their residences and the rumor was current that strenuous effort will be made to arrange the affair amicably Another rumor was that Mr Bedford and his brother Dr Bedford had left the city to be present at the duel, the former as a second, and the latter in his professional capacity

May be in Baltimore

WASHINGTON, Jan 7 A gentleman who arrived from Baltimore to-day says that last night he saw Frederick May at the Maryland Club in that city

May Is There.

BALTIMORE, Jan 7 Dr Frederick May, cousin of Mr May who assaulted Mr Bennett, is in this city

WASHINGTON

Grover Again.

WASHINGTON Jan 6 Gov Grover testified before the Senate Election Committee to-day that he knew of no money having been sent to Oregon for election purposes of any sort Did not know money was raised by subscription by the chairman of the State Democratic Committee to pay the expenses of the Electoral messenger

He said that he never received a printed brief from New York in relation to the Watts case, but received a printed brief from some place and person unknown to witness This brief was a collection of English decisions It was a compound of conflicting decisions The witness received no instruction from New York pointing out the way in which he should act in relation to the Watts case

That $8000 Check.

Enos Runyon of New York, of the firm of Martin & Runyon was examined, but positively declined to give the name of the customer for whom they drew an $8000 check payable to Ladd & Bush of Oregon

Pelton's Anxiety About the Bankers.

Barton Harrison in response to questions put to him by Senator Mitchell testified that he was consulted by Mr Runyon the day before yesterday regarding the subpœna received by them, had no previous acquaintance with them, but had reason to expect a call from one of them on that day, because a friend in private conversation with him that day had foreshadowed it Being asked by Senator Morton the name of this friend, he declined to give it, but subsequently being pressed by the committee for an answer, stated that it was W T Pelton, Secretary of the Democratic National Committee Pelton stated to the witness that he did not know why Martin & Runyon had been subpœnaed and had no knowledge of their business

Runyon Recalled

Watts testified to his resigning his Postmastership by telegraph, and its acceptance on the 16th of November Runyon was again questioned as to whether he knew William T Pelton and as to whether Patton knew anything about the $8000, but Runyon said that he did not know the man only by sight and nothing ever passed between Pelton and himself about the $8,000 check or about his (Runyon's) coming to Washington Cronin was excused from further attendance on the committee. Runyon's refusal to give the name of the party giving him the $8 000 check, will be reported to the Senate with the request that action be taken to compel him to answer

The Senate Committees.

WASHINGTON, Jan 7 There is not much prospect for the transaction of any important business by the Senate until the return of the Investigating Committee from the South, and but few bills can be reported from the Committee before that time. There is not an important committee but what has from two to five of its members either absent from the city or assigned to special duty, and it is impossible to secure a quorum in most of them

Governor Kellogg's Second Application for Protection.

WASHINGTON, Jan 7. It will be recollected that last week the Louisiana Republican Legislature passed a resolve asking military protection against apprehended Democratic violence and that this resolution was telegraphed to the President and laid before the Cabinet last Tuesday, when it was deemed proper that no action should be taken upon it, but since that time Gov. Kellogg actuated by a like fear telegraphed to the President to the same effect and desiring the recognition of the Governor and Legislature, as two inaugurations will take place to-morrow in New Orleans, that of Packard (Republican) and of Nicholls (Democratic) by their respective parties.

The President's Reply.

The President having prepared a reply to Gov Kellogg's telegram, called an extraordinary meeting of the Cabinet to-day at one o'clock to inform the members of his proceedings, and to secure harmonious action The reply was unanimously approved and this afternoon transmitted by telegram to Gov Kellogg, and the substance was afterwards given by the President himself on application to the representative of the Associated Press as follows

"There will be two inaugurations of Governors to-morrow unless one of them is prevented I do not, however, propose to interfere with them I have nothing before me to justify action in the way of recognizing either Governor and therefore cannot do so, particularly as a committee of each House of Congress is now engaged in investigating all the facts of the State election, including the contests of the two Governors and the two Legislatures, both claiming to be legally elected For me under these circumstances to recognize one or the other would be hardly justifiable "

The President repeated that he would not interfere by recognizing either government until the contest should be settled through Congressional investigation now in progress, but he should consider it his "duty to keep the peace if occasion require and prevent bloodshed pending the political complications "

FOREIGN NEWS.

TURKEY

Still Refusing Russia's Demands.

NEW YORK, Jan A Vienna special says a note has been forwarded by Geo Ignatieff the Russian plenipotentiary, to Midhat Pasha concerning the programme of the conference Ignatieff appeals to the patriotism of the Grand Vizier and urges on him the acceptance of the proposals of conference The Porte still persistently refuses to comply with certain demands

Doubt and Uncertainty

LONDON, Jan 6 The Globe states that Russia has ordered 14 Krupp eleven-inch guns for Cronstadt The Pall Mall Gazette says it seems doubtful whether at any time more uncertainty or confusion has prevailed about the Turkish question than at this moment It is clear the committee of foreign statesmen assembled in Constantinople has itself fallen into much disorder and if the Turks are only resolute enough at this hour and are thereafter truly solicitous and speedy in establishing reforms of their own and a new constitution, they will boast of having defeated and silenced all Europe

A Diplomatic Victory.

LONDON, Jan 7 The New York Herald special says The general opinion is that the Turks have gained a diplomatic victory over the European plenipotentiaries and that the result so far is a decided improvement in the Turkish position. Midhat and his colleagues, encouraged by General Ignatieff's concessions and taking them as evidence of Russian weakness have resolved to terminate the European pressure on Turkey by a bold and decided action Encouraged by reports of a break down of Russian preparations and the bad state of the mobilized Russian army they became convinced of their ability to beat Russia in the field even should they have to dispense with English assistance Germany is preparing to mobilize two army corps for the purpose of watching the Polish frontier. This is in accordance with the statement made some time ago that in the event of war Germany would aid Russia by taking care of Poland Austria is collecting munitions of war at Semlin, opposite Belgrade, preparatory to seizing the Servian capital in the event of Russian occupation of Roumania.

SCHOOLCRAFT AND COE'S NOVELTY company gave the very best variety performance Saturday evening that has been seen in Norombega Hall for a long time, and they had as good house as often gathers on such occasions. Some of their specialties are very fine indeed, particularly the Irish sketches by Kelley and Ryan, Schoolcraft and Coe's banjo playing and singing, and Stewart Dare's horizontal bar acts. Dare has but one leg, but he gives a performance that the best gymnasts of the country will find it hard to excel, even if they equal it. The company give their closing performance this evening and will undoubtedly draw a full house.

SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP SEA WEED TONIC AND MANDRAKE PILLS — These deservedly celebrated and popular medicines have effected a revolution in the healing art and proved the fallacy of several maxims which have for many years obstructed the progress of medical science The false supposition that "Consumption is incurable deterred physicians from attempting to find remedies for that disease and patients afflicted with it reconciled themselves to death without making an effort to escape from a doom which they supposed to be unavoidable. It is now proved, however that Consumption can be cured and that it has been cured in a very great number of cases (some of them apparently desperate ones) by Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup alone, and in other cases by the same medicine in connection with Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic and Mandrake Pills one or both, according to the requirements of the case

Dr Schenck himself who enjoyed uninterrupted good health for more than forty years, was supposed at one time to be at the very gate of death, his physicians having pronounced his case hopeless, and abandoned him to his fate He was cured by the aforesaid medicines and, since his recovery many thousands similarly affected have used Dr Schenck's preparations with the same remarkable success

Full directions accompany each making it not absolutely necessary to personally see Dr Schenck unless patients wish their lungs examined, and for this purpose he is professionally at his principal office, Corner Sixth and Arch Sts, Philadelphia, every Monday where all letters for advice must be addressed Schenck's medicines are sold by all druggists eod1m jan1

Her Life and Love

BY Y HARTWELL.

When Mandy sprung into existence,and how she for several years maintained that existance, historian sayeth not. "What was her father? Who was her mother? Had she a sister? Had she a brother?" are also unsolved problems.

Strande the discovery of herself while playing with the baby of some woman who had gone out washing. Her senses received with the first sweet facts as that the sunshone, earth and growing grasses smelled sweet, the baby's cheeks were round and soft, and his breath balmy. She was glad with the joy of a lamb, and frolicked away with it; bringing the baby pebbles, rolling over in soft places, and adopting down the narrow street. Having thus found herself, she continued hand in hand with that self through years along the world, passing not from glory to glory, but from stratum to stratum of dirt, now under one woman's hand, now under another's, until, pausing at that line which divides childhood from maidenhood, her wary skull had acquired excuse in dodging the strength of Mrs. Jinks.

Mrs. Jinks was a person of few teeth, but much tongue, whose forehead was a fine specimen of deep yellow lines, whose elbows were ever sharp and grated, the motto of whose callee dress-skirt was "ever onward and upward;" she supported seven small children and one large husband by boarding "railroad hands," and Mandy was her assistant.

"Spring now!" bawled Mrs. Jinks, as she dished the breakfast hash. "If hear the men a comin' on, and that milkman hain't got round yet! Fill up the coffee-pot and take that pitcher and run across the alley and borry some milk of them folks. Tell em we'll pay 'em soon's the milk-mia comes."

Mandy took the pitcher and ran across the alley to "them folks." The house of them folk' fronted on an avenue, and from the highest point in the yard you could catch the blue eye of the lake. It was built of that gray brick which makes Milwaukee bilious so famously pretty, and had bide-ons, former windows, and pretty to all red porches. From it, as Mandy approached was bursting such music as reminded her of all she knew about heaven.

Mrs. Jinks was not at all on intimate terms with them folks. "Mandy stood abashed before the tidy maid to proffer her request.

While the damsel went somewhat unwillingly to fill her milk-jug, she followed the music above the law of her nature, as the cat obeyed the law of his nature, down the labyrinth. Mandy stood unstrungly open. She slipped across a carpet, along a matted passage, through a drawing-room furnished in style so luxurious that it took her breath, and stood before an opening no wider than her hand but between full ng doors. Through this peek she saw a young lady at a piano with a young lady as Mandy had not even dreamed of before. To be sure, only love-lit ladies and shoulders, and sweeping gowns, and flying hands were visible, but enough of the mere square inch of this young lady would have convinced you she was of superior quality.

Oh, how like she do that!" thought Mandy. I knows jes when to hit every time! I want to do it!" Oh my!" clenching her fists as the called up where her fingers in the air were jumping and wiggling all over. Oh I want to!"

Still the young lady's hands flew, and Mandy hung at the crack.

What a rush of heavy chords, Aurora turned on the music stool, calling in soft, petite tones.

Hurry! we must hop to breakfast yet. Now!" which she encountered an eerie stare of Mandy being staring at her he would the goose

Do you want me?" asked Miss Aurora dimpling at the girl's curiosity.

I declare! you replied Mandy, "I could be the music!"

Laugh! the black and come through" Miss M Aurora. Do you like music?"

Mandy shuffling on the opening like an automaton, and without up to touch the keys. I love it!" she said, with the faltering tone of one who speaks her heart. Nobody ever showed me, but I think I could learn it easy.

She took Pearl the lovely woman beside her then down her own sooty little high, at those shoes with the bad—her eyes, yearning, dark fingers, her mouth red to pause itself steadily, but quivered. Oh I do wish I'm following where her hands to lead! but I'm now shrunk up I'm bad to be, too superior in culture, Pearl to" brushed her eyes

There was something sweet and winning in Mandy. She had no beauty. Her eyes were ordinary, the forehead over them smooth and broad, but her cheeks were gaunt and sunken, her nose tilted, and her sensuous softly-rounded chin, hidden in a throat off-set to the pale little mouth. Yet was she sweet and powerful with some super-soul strength, like a human wild flower wakened spell, so that she

Mr. Aurora

What is your name?" inquired the young lady.

Mandy (Clim shaking, and drops fling like a quick Autumn shower. She turned away and swept her face with a sleeve. Out of her tears, as from a cloud, turned back staunchly and added, to prove her composure), Live with Mrs. Jinks.

What Mr. Jinks let you come in here? I'll show you something about music else will!"

You're just a saying it!" accused Mandy, the child used to put Miss Aurora on her oath Saying it and meaning it," laughed Aurora. Here's my breakfast-bell. Come back this evening. Will you?

Yes indeed, she replied to Miss Aurora. You bet your head, won't I!" she replied to herself).

She came near losing her head, notwithstanding it was thus staked, when Miss Aurora threw her arm around her shoulders and led her to the breakfast-room.

Oh, just see!" cried Aurora, as she seized her pitcher and flew like Mercury across the alley. "Oh my, my! I'm late!

When Miss Aurora was not at once in the room. The child saw her now only as a black, pin-cushion-turned image, to be set down with silent dismay. But with some perception of sweeter uses in Miss Aurora she kept repeating, "I can't she! My!

Aurora been a time!" bawled Mrs. Jinks when the milk-jug was safely in hand and then men a-waiting for their coffee! When you get sent on an errand again said Mrs. Jinks, with the air of one withdrawing choice blessings, "you'll know it!"

Accordingly Mandy "knew it" that evening when she was sent with the milk-jug on a certain trip. She "knew it" with keen delight.

Miss Aurora was fortunately alone, and at her instruction. The alibi face had slipped but memory still peered this second time round a door at her. She recalled her promise with a little gesture of surprise.

If Miss Aurora had been superior in morning dress, she was made transcendent to Mandy's eyes by the few cordial touches with which she had brightened herself for evening.

Here we are!" cried Aurora gaily "Now sit by me and I'll sing for you before we begin our lesson."

Mandy squared gingerly in a great crimson arm-chair, and watched her goddess banish

Miss Aurora struck some chords and began to sing from a sparkling little opera. Her voice was contralto, rich and flexible. She sang "La Mignon," and Mandy brought Mandy to her feet. When Miss Aurora finished, she took up the last few strains with the abandon of a gipsey, and dashed them off in golden soprano which whirled the young lady round to face her.

Child, did you ever sing?"

Only a little—what I hear 'em sing in churches I never tried it with a piano."

"Sing something for me."

Mandy stood up, crossing her hands behind her, and sang "The banished heart is sighing." She sinked quaint, plaintive, original, and put in trills of

She sang with thrilling power.

Sit down here by me" Miss Aurora, drawing her to the one ever tell you you have a voice?

But there—I won't remember, while I am talking. Did many people have ruined themselves in music by their self-conceit. But, my little girl, if you have culture, I am to reason why you may not become what God evidently meant you to be. Would you like to study your living by music, maiden?"

Mandy regarded Miss Aurora with a fixed stare, as if that young lady had mastered her by inquiring whether she would like to earn her living going to Heaven.

Would you?" repeated Miss Aurora, lifting a piece of Mandy's thin, ugly, tallied hair.

O—oh!" breathed the girl in long-drawn bliss.

Rise up!" cried Aurora in sudden energy. "I'll teach you all I know, at any rate. We'll begin this evening." "Mandy, you have wings to carry you over the drudgery"

So, under Miss Aurora's excited hands, her whole horizon, bounded by black keys and silver cords, was flooded by black keys and silver cords, His child began to live. She learned with hungry zeal, and caught the relations of chords by intuition.

These workless hands, starving-eyed, till Aurora started back from her watch with a little scream "Why, child, its eleven o'clock!"

Mandy lifted a ghastly stare. She thought of Mrs. Jinks and her powerful hand. Of the Jinks' stronghold, barred and bolted, and grim at this hour of the night.

I have detained you too long, but will sing one piece, then I'll call our man and go home with you. And to-morrow I'll see the woman with whom you live—Mrs. Jinks, is it?—and get her permission for you to come on my afternoons."

Said Mrs. Jinks next day, after she had stood bland and complaisant before the young lady, and whispered agreement to all the young lady's propositions, "said Mrs. Jinks, turning round to Mandy as soon as her intercessor disappeared—"So you want to set up for a lady, do you? Want to play the spanner and git in with them folks? Look at your black hands! What can they do on the pyanner? You're a pretty bird!" bowled Mrs Jinks, intending to be humorous. "Pretty bird you be, round hangin' on rich folks, and seein' them to teach you the pyanner"!

Mandy's flexible mouth knit itself. But having no words to express to her patient Beautiful, neither barking dogs nor raving lions could turn her back.

II.

Weeks slid into months. Frost and chill came on the earth, and people changed with seasons.

The child 'Mandy grew

While her body served at the Jinks, she herself Pearl Aurora, and took polish from Miss Aurora. She was at that point in girl life when rapid changes take place, and she was being cast in a new mould. Every moment she could beg, earn or steal from service, she gave to music. You might have seen her darting across the lawn at any hour, bending her happiness to the entering, to listen if strange voices talked with Miss Aurora, showing her glad little heart if no sound could be heard, and disappearing with walls to fling out gushes of music to you. Her touch was thrilling and sweet, rather than brilliant. What she lacked in practiced skill she made up in feeling. Her inner world was the source of sowing away through the upper register. She caught scraps of opera, and ballads became her delight. Every day of this gathering of experience was one blessed afternoon to herself. But visitors were making the house on the hill merry She shrunk back to the street, and came

It was on one of this occasion 'Mandy was a desperate girl. She pulled her ridiculous hat over her eyes, and trod the pavements, as if they were her enemies. An open church inspiration entered her She walked in, feeling like the monarch of all she surveyed. She meant to do or die

A solid young man was pleading burning sermons in his study She appeared before him, requesting to try the organ. Before deep in his "Why my beloved brethren," she had sailed for a mighty fugue, he would have replied just as he did without looking up, "Certainly my dear sir to be sure"

Then the desperate girl felt about the universe for a blower, whom she found in the person of one Billy Smith, who had handled the pump on occasions, and who, in consideration of the ought of experience she could offer in the world, struck a bargain and followed her aloft

Mandy had never be ore touched an organ. She had reverent breath on it, read all the stops, pulled them out and pushed them back thunderously But the spirit of it got into her fingers, and in its surge of sound made brilliant combinations, forgot herself and sung with joy and power in the midst of thunder.

She crept down from the loft about dusk with shining eyes, and a face rich as sunset. Afterwards she divided her pilgrimages between Miss Aurora's instrument, which first gave her gladness, and the organ, which gave her more gladness.

The man, a person of parts who has a gift of God gets dignity thereby which his fellows must respect Mrs. Jinks caused to hurl fiery darts at her thrall's hands. Those hands were learning a beautiful secret which would draw her out of Mrs Jinks atmosphere. Therefore Mrs Jinks shrunk from bullying to whining. She knowed 'Mandy didn't care nothin' about her, and family Pearel like she cared more for the Miss Roarer than she did for them that had done so much for her Pearel like she didn't care for nobody but that Miss Roarer' Mrs Jinks couldn't see nothing in that Miss Roarer so much better than other folks"

But Mandy could.

Why Miss Aurora took such violent fancy to this child was a problem to her household They thought at first it was the curly locks of 'Mandy's head. "Why, what pretty hair you have, darling" she said, wheeling the anon in both hands. "Soft, too" lurking it over her finger, "and bright as bronze' So long for a child's hair. How old are you?" she drew it from the forehead and burnished with a laugh.

I think I must be fifteen," replied 'Mandy.

Heavy lamb's fleece. Why, mine is scarcely longer now"

Miss Aurora crinkled it over the brown front, and turning up 'Mandy's face to see the effect. At the moment a study the gown through November night-skies. Aurora saw the eyes were deep and brooding with the passion of youth, and bent over and kissed it And in kissing it, she sealed a loyal heart to herself in love, such as few mortals are blessed with

While the storm raged without like a mad and baffled world, this child slept in her comforter's arms. I wonder all she lie so, while she is resting from her stormy passage, in the arms of the Best Comforter

The Judge was a short, but dignified man. Between the cold, calm lashes of his eyes, and his bald head, was a stretch smaller for a long distance, but with an upper slope toward the brow

Two things absorbed him—the law and his daughter. The last first, as the grandest of all human conceptions, and a structure to be maintained at any cost, a temple demanding a priesthood His daughter, as the flower in the individual life

The Judge was a just man, but awfully severe. Criminals who stood under his sentence expected nothing but the rigor of the law.

He had bitter enemies among criminals.

There was a man who came down step by step to desperate courses. His career was that of a man or woman, that man or woman must take the suffering of the creator along with the glory. The laying of gills is exactly the same as of grow like a tree, adding ring to ring, while the stand bare and fully developed. Rather is he like lightning, which is forever crashing, yet is always the same—the child of the clouds.

But Mandy had escaped the passions of life. It is natural to her type to conceal love. It is natural to her type to conceal grief even with poignant suffering, such sacred feelings.

Aurora put a cushion beside her knee, reseating for her child, and began to dress the heavy locks of 'Mandy's head. "Why, what pretty hair you have, darling" she said, wheeling the anon in both hands. "Soft, too" lurking it over her finger, "and bright as bronze' So long for a child's hair. How old are you?" she drew it from the forehead and burnished with a laugh.
